2 named to Main Street Gburg board

Nov 1, 2017

Two new directors were elected to the Main Street Gettysburg Board of Directors in 2017, strengthening the diverse skills and professional backgrounds of the board.

John Rice was elected at the March 22 board meeting and Jennifer Stetter was elected at the Sept. 27 board meeting.

Rice, a life-long resident of Gettysburg, resides in a house on West Broadway within the Borough of Gettysburg. He has a special interest in history and architecture, and worked summers as a licensed battlefield guide. He graduated from Yale with a B.A. in political science. As vice president of Rice Fruit Company in Adams County, he was responsible for sales at the largest apple packer in the East. He is now focused on his community and helping to improve it as a volunteer.

Stetter, an associate with Barley Snyder Attorneys at Law, earned her juris doctorate degree from Villanova University School of Law. Her practice areas include personal planning and litigation. Stetter practices primarily in the Hanover office, but spends some time in the newly-opened Gettysburg office on East Middle Street.

"We are thrilled to have new faces, fresh ideas and impressive leadership to add to our existing team of skilled and impactful directors," said Emmett Patterson, board chair.

Rice and Stetter join 10 other directors, including Patterson, Vice Chair Susan Naugle, Secretary Lynda Glass, President Deb Adamik, Dan Bringman, Norris Flowers, Peter Monahan, Jane North, Dave Sites and Jackie White.
